Joseph Desmond promoted to Chief of Police

By LIZZY HILL
News Correspondent

WILMINGTON — Last week, the Wilmington Police Department posted their congratulations to Joseph Desmond, who's been promoted from acting chief to WPD's Chief of Police. Town Manager Jeffery Hull announced the new chief's title to the rest of the police department employees and praised Desmond's collaborative leadership style.

After serving as acting chief since April 5, Desmond shared that he is very pleased with the town's decision. He started his now 31 year long career in public service in Wilmington in 1988 as a patrol officer. Then, he slowly rose through the ranks as a sergeant, then a lieutenant, and operations lieutenant before he started as acting chief.

In a statement on the Wilmington Police Department website, the department wrote, "Chief Desmond served on the NEMLEC Tactical Police Force & Regional Response Team for many years during his time as Patrol Officer and Sergeant."

In all of these positions, Desmond was able to gain the experience that he needed in order to step into his current role.

He explained that part of what he's developed in terms of skill and experience comes from the good leaders that he's been able to learn from.

"When I was younger I had a lot of great sergeants who taught me," Desmond said.

He also is grateful to have had the opportunity to work under Chief Michael Begonis and Deputy Chief Rictor that made way for him to act as chief in their absence.

What makes a good police chief, in his eyes, is someone who works with a high level of honesty and integrity.

"Having a calm demeanor is also important. Each day could bring on something new," he continued.

Another necessarily skill is being able to actively listen to the department and to members of the community and address their needs as he sees fit. Finally, he mentioned that it helps having knowledge about the town. Desmond aims to uphold these values as he continues to serve the community that he grew up in.

As he starts his own transition into chief, Desmond's first outward focus will be on promoting some personnel inside of the police department.

"Since my position is now permanent, we need a new deputy chief. We get to promote two lieutenants and

ZBA looks to hire traffic consultant for 'Ledges' review

By PATRICK BLAIS

WOBURN — The Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) will likely hire an independent traffic consultant to review a developer's contention that it can stack as many as 18 heavy dump trucks within the Ledges at Woburn site in North Woburn.

During a meeting this week in City Hall, Concord attorney Paul Haverty, representing Woburn 38 Development, explained his client recently hired outside engineering company Allen & Major to prepare schematic designs showing where customers will wait to pickup crushed rock and other aggregate material purchases at 1042 Main Street.

The truck stacking plan was circulated as Woburn 38's parent company, Connecticut's Franklin Construction Company, is asking the zoning board to sanction the proposed distribution of crushed stone to outside parties who would travel to and from the active construction zone by the Wilmington line.

The plans, as well as a list of suggested restrictions on those sales operations, are intended to demonstrate that

Outdoor seating area at the library

By TINA STEWART
Library Director

We are pleased to announce that Wilmington Memorial Library now has a lovely outdoor seating area in the green space directly behind the library. There are two picnic tables and two benches on a concrete patio, surrounded by flowers and shrubs with a nice view of the adjacent wetlands.

It's great to see visitors using this space to read, have a snack or just relax during a quiet time. The space offers some shady areas and wifi access will be available in a few weeks. If you bring a snack, please note that there are no trash barrels and we ask that you comply with "carry in and carry out."

The funding for this project came for the 2017 and 2018 Friends of the Library Annual Appeal. Thank you to all who generously contributed.

In addition, state aid funds and gift monies were also used to pay for the construction and furniture of this outdoor space. We hope many will enjoy WML's new outdoor seating area.

TAX-SAVING SECRETS

OF COMBINING SUMMER BUSINESS AND PERSONAL VACATION TRAVEL AFTER TAX REFORM
— PART III —

Once at the destination, out-of-pocket expenses for business days are fully deductible. Out-of-pocket expenses include lodging, hotel tips, seminar and convention fees and cab fare. Your meals (subject to the 50 percent disallowance rule) during business days are also deductible, even if they are "personal," i.e., not connected with business. No deduction is allowed for meals or lodging expenses deemed lavish, extravagant or unreasonable. Expenses for personal days are nondeductible, except in the "Saturday night stayover" situation explained below.

Maximizing the Tax Benefits of a Saturday Night Stay
An effective strategy for maximizing deductions of the personal portion of a trip is with a Saturday night stay. This occurs when a taxpayer reduces the overall cost of his/her trip by extending a stay at the travel location in order to take advantage of lower return airfare rates. It must be shown that staying the extra day or two costs less than returning home immediately after the business meeting is over. The IRS has ruled (Private Letter Ruling 9237014, dated June 10, 1992) that under a "common sense test," a hardheaded businessperson would do the same and, thus, allows the deduction of the additional meals (subject to the 50 percent disallowance rule) and lodging expenses for the extra day(s) as ordinary business expenses. Naturally, this is applicable only if a dominant business purpose for the trip exists. It is prudent to document that airfare savings exceeded the out-of-pocket costs of staying the extra day(s) and to maintain the documentation.

News and notes from WCTV

early days in school.

(We recorded the interviews at the Buzzell Senior Center, the same building many of our interviewees attended school in the 1940s!)

This project was over a year in the making. With hours of raw footage to parse through (and only so much time dedicated each week to editing), it took quite awhile to weave the stories together. But I think the end result is something special for the community and the families of those who participated.

"Wilmington Remembers" will premiere on Comcast Channel 9 and Verizon Channel 37 on Wednesday, July 31 at 8 p.m. It'll re-air that night at 10 p.m. and then on our channel for the next few weeks. You can also stream the video online that night. Look for a link at wctv.org.

Thank you to all of those who told their stories. Without them, this wouldn't have been possible. There is a special showing earlier in the day at the Senior Center for them and others who want to watch it ahead of time.

History:

Maine pioneer born in Woburn, but house in Wilmington

By LARZ F. NEILSON

Colonel Jonathan Buck was a pioneer in Maine with a long and impressive career, with a few strange quirks. He was born in Woburn in a house that is in Wilmington. He founded the town of Bucksport, Maine, yet he was a lifelong citizen of Massachusetts.

He is primarily known today for something that showed up more than a half-century after his death, something that is absolutely false. Jonathan Buck was born in 1719 in the Benjamin Buck house, which is now in Wilmington. At the time of his birth, however, it was part of Woburn, as Wilmington was founded 11 years later.

Ephraim Buck had first settled in Woburn in 1672, making the Bucks one of the oldest families in the Town of Wilmington. Jonathan was his grandson, born to Ebenezer and Lydia (Eames) Buck on Feb. 20, 1719.

Lydia Buck died only a few years after marrying Ebenezer. He moved to Haverhill, and that is where Jonathan grew up. In 1762, Jonathan sought permission to build a shipyard on Mill Brook in Haverhill. The town denied him permission.

He and seven others sailed to the Penobscot River, which was then in part of Massachusetts, settling in what they called Bucks-towne. It would later be renamed Bucksport. There he built a 60-ton sloop which he named The Hannah, the first sloop ever built on the Penobscot.

The Bucks had been on the Penobscot for more than a dozen years when the American Revolution broke out. Jonathan Buck was nearly 60 and a lieutenant colonel in command of the Fifth Massachusetts Militia Regiment.

Exactly 240 years ago, on July 26, 1779, an American armada of 19 ships and 24 troop carriers sailed to the Penobscot to oust a small British force at Castine. It was the largest American naval force in the Revolutionary War. Its command, however, was not equivalent to the force or the task. The fleet was commanded by Adm. Dudley Saltonstall.

Land forces were under Brig. Gen. Solomon Lovell. In command of the artillery was Lt. Col. Paul Revere.

Jonathan Buck, evidently with no regiment to offer, nonetheless went to offer his services to the Massachusetts forces.

The Brits had three sloops and a few other vessels, with about 700 troops, who had been in Castine little over a month. They had issued a call to local residents to help build a fort. Fort George was a small affair with low walls. To the Brits, Massachusetts was still a British colony. They called the area east of the Penobscot "New Ireland." The French were battling for claim on the land, as well.

The Americans launched an attack on the fort, sending in nine ships against the three British sloops. American transports landed troops, which made some progress. Three parties of Americans managed to scale the rocky heights and were able to take out a British battery. However, they had lost 50 men. Having successfully gained the heights, they now faced the firepower of the fort, which turned them back.

Revere wrote a scathing criticism of the attack.

Later, a militia colonel gave Saltonstall a description of the fort and a plan to take it. Saltonstall refused. Army officers and naval officers alike implored Saltonstall to take decisive action, but he took none.

In spite of their overwhelming numbers, the Americans took no advantage. Commodore Saltonstall dithered around in Penobscot Bay, worrying that the islands near Castine offered insufficient protection. The siege dragged on for 21 days, at which point a British fleet arrived. The American ships, apparently with no plan, fled up the Penobscot, abandoning supplies and men on the banks.

The American losses were devastating. Saltonstall's flagship, the Warren, was blown up and other vessels were also destroyed. Massachusetts no longer had a state navy, and the U.S. Navy also suffered a devastating setback.

▲ The Benjamin Buck house near the end of Wildwood Street in Wilmington was the birthplace of Jonathan Buck in 1719. His place of birth is listed as Woburn, as the town of Wilmington did not exist.

Buckstowne was burned. Soldiers and sailors fled on foot south and west. Buck and his family made their way slowly back to Haverhill, to remain there for four years.

Saltonstall and Revere were both court-martialed. Revere was acquitted. There is no record of the outcome of Saltonstall's trial.

Jonathan and Lydia Buck eventually returned to the Penobscot and rebuilt the town. He died there on March 18, 1795. In 1793, the town voted to change its name from Buckstowne to Bucksport. More than 60 years after his death, the Town of Bucksport erected a large granite obelisk monument at his grave. Several years later, a flaw became evident in the stone, in the form of a human leg. Efforts were made to remove the blemish, but it always returned.

Someone started a story, that Col. Buck had served as a judge and had condemned a woman to death for witchcraft. The tale goes on to say that the leg image is the revenge of that witch.

It's a great story, but it isn't true. Buck never served as a judge. The witch trials took place nearly 30 years before he was born. But in spite of his many exploits and accomplishments, it is the geologic flaw on his monument that generates the most interest in Lt. Col. Jonathan Buck.

Bucksport held a birthday party on July 18 in honor of Jonathan Buck's 300 birthday.

Book Stew Reviews

'Searching for Sylvie Lee' by Jean Kwok

By EILEEN MACDOUGALL

Here's a multi-narrator, suspenseful domestic thriller set in Amsterdam, featuring a fractured Chinese-American family. Amy is searching for her elder sister Sylvie, who disappeared after returning to Holland to see their dying grandmother. Sylvie was raised by her aunt and uncle in Amsterdam until she was nine, due to the financial struggles of her parents, who were just getting launched in New York City after emigrating from China.

Sylvie, on the surface successful in marriage and career, is really yearning for her grandmother and her cousin Lukas, a devoted childhood companion. The voices of Amy, Sylvie, and their mother, all owning disparate pieces of the puzzle of Sylvie, are dramatic and sympathetic, and there are excellent secondary characters as well. A fine, twisty novel.

Quotes: "Ma is delicate and yielding, like a coconut rice ball. Sylvie is all long limbs and sharp edges, more of a broadsword saber."

"If you do not speak, no one will ever hear you."

Area hospitals take another step in addressing SUD

BOSTON — 12 hospitals in the Boston and Cambridge area have signed a commitment to provide mandatory substance use disorder (SUD) training to all of their hospital-based physicians and residents in key departments, and to also adopt at least three of 10 SUD initiatives designed to support their employees.

Boston Medical Center President and CEO Kate Walsh, Brigham Health President Betsy Nabel, M.D., and RIZE Massachusetts, the non-profit foundation addressed the opioid epidemic convened the hospital group earlier in 2019.

In addition to BMC and Brigham Health, the participating hospitals are Brigham and Women's Faulkner Hospital; Tufts Medical Center; Massachusetts General Hospital; Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Mount Auburn Hospital and New England Baptist Hospital, all part of Beth Israel Lahey Health; Cambridge Health Alliance; Boston Children's Hospital; Carney Hospital; and St. Elizabeth's Medical Center. Winchester Hospital, Lahey Health and Melrose-Wakefield Hospital are all part of the combine.

Specifically, the hospitals have committed to mandatory training of all hospital-based ED physicians, hospitalists, obstetricians, psychiatrists, adolescent pediatricians, infectious disease specialists, primary care providers, and internal medicine residents who are not already waiver-trained to prescribe buprenorphine.

(The federal government requires "X-waivers," consisting of training and registration, before a clinician can prescribe buprenorphine for use in maintenance therapy for patients with SUD.)

The training the 12 hospitals will offer will be focused on the fundamentals of addiction, effective treatment options, and addressing the stigma associated with SUD. The hospitals are also strongly encouraged to train other providers and commit to increasing the number of caregivers who are waiver-trained.

As for employee support, the hospitals are asked to choose at least three actions from the following list:

- free naloxone training, surveying employees about the need for SUD support, reviewing existing SUD benefits,
- putting existing benefits in an SUD guide for all employees,
- creating an SUD Employee Support Policy,
- developing training for managers to help them identify and support workers with SUD,
- setting up a family support group on site,
- holding a public "Town Hall" event to discuss the issue,
- sending a letter from the CEO promising a stigma-free workplace,
- sharing a pledge to encourage employees to use stigma-free language (such as "person with SUD" as opposed to "addict").

Critical thinking becoming added need in today's age

I have a question as to the purpose of taking an hour of CNN to explain which candidates will be on the nights of the coming debates. Cameras were placed over and around those making the choices looking like someone was hearing that something went wrong in the past which is strange.

This came along with a third draw for those determined as the top candidates in some national polling. Following this was a debate of how the candidates on the slates selected would work in terms of the chemistry and policies of those picked for each night.

I hear many saying that they are waiting closer to election day to hear the real final choices.

How much "critical thinking" can be taught and where it can be taught still remain in focus but leading educators say "critical thinking" can be woven into all subjects.

Dan Harrington of the University of Virginia says, "the ability to think critically is viewed as a cornerstone of individual civic engagement and economic success."

He adds we may disagree on which content students should learn but whatever they end up learning, students ought to think critically about it.

Components include that thinking be original in the moment, that thinking is self directed and that thinking respects conventions

JUST A NOTE — Thanks for your e-mails at andrews@massupt.org and let me add some Morning Pulse extractions: Alexa may be key to Amazon's looming domination of the health-care market; real estate is back as America's favorite long-term investment; should a parent or student take out student loans; should we be worried about Social Security going bankrupt (Read the Sunday Globe on this); 56 percent of Americans don't know how much they need to retire; average US price for gas up 10 cents per gallon and a lack of innovation could be why investments in China's tech firms are plunging.

Wilmington Rotary Club's 5th annual Ice Bucket Challenge

WILMINGTON — August is designated "Ice Bucket Challenge Month" until a cure for A.L.S. is found. Last year's enormous success was terrific, but further monies are needed for continuing the research into curing this hideous disease.

Towards that end, the Wilmington Rotary Club will be holding the third community wide Ice Bucket Challenge on Saturday, August 17 at 9 a.m. The challenge will be held, rain or shine, at Rotary Park and everyone is welcome to come and join with Rotarians for this challenge.

A.L.S., commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease, is a progressive neurodegenerative disease that affects the nerve cells in the brain and spinal cord, and is always fatal. Unfortunately, too many of us have been visited by this disease, through family, neighbors or friends.

Perhaps you did the challenge last year or perhaps this would be your first time. Please plan on joining the Rotary Club either as a participant, or spectator. People of all ages will be able to join in the fun. They will have plenty of buckets, ice and water. If you have a favorite bucket, please bring it. As this is a fund raising event for A.L.S. research, they ask that you bring a donation of any amount with you on Aug. 19.

If unfortunately you're unable to join with them, donations in any amount can be sent to Wilmington Rotary Club, P. O. Box 503, Wilmington, MA 01887 or <https://theangelfund.org/> and please respond "Wilmington Rotary" in the message section.

Be assured that 100 percent of all funds raised will be donated toward Angel Fund for A.L.S. research.

Visit Yarmouth for the 2019 Sand Sculpture Trail

By HEATHER BURNS
News Correspondent

As a kid, was there anything as fun and creative as playing in the sand? Not at a playground sandbox, but at your favorite beach. Under the summer sun, the “free license” to get on your hands and knees in the sand and create was quite an attraction, but not without its disappointments.

Children spending hours building the perfect sandcastle, only to have it eventually swallowed by the sea, was the plight of every childhood beach sculptor.

Now you can leave your fears of sandcastle disaster behind as you experience the “2019 Yarmouth Sand Sculpture Trail.” Located on the summer vacation destination of Cape Cod, this event is known as one of Yarmouth’s biggest attractions.

This sand sculpture trail features 33 outstanding sculptures, made entirely out of sand, and on display throughout the community. (Yes, all are displayed a safe distance from the crashing waves of the ocean!)

The sand sculptures for this event are created by Fitzysnowman Sculpting Studio. This Massachusetts based business provides unique experiences through the use of art, and takes sandcastle creations to the next level. Their work has been featured at the Revere Beach Sand Sculpting Festival and the first indoor winter sand sculpting contest for Worcester First Night.

This year, the 33 sculptures on display were created with over 115 tons of specialty imported sand. The largest sculpture on the trail was created with 15 tons of sand, and is located in front of the Yarmouth Chamber of Commerce building.

Other sand sculptures on the trail can be found in front of different participating businesses. Each one of these sculptures is made with three tons of sand and takes about nine hours to complete. All sculptures are different and unique to the business that displays them.

The Yarmouth Chamber of Commerce encourages everyone to enter the Sand Sculpture Trail Photo Contest while you are visiting the trail.

One entry per person will be accepted for the photo contest, with up to three photos in any of the three named categories. Prizes of gift certificates from local businesses will be awarded for photos in each of the three categories: Most Creative Photo, Sand Sculpture Selfie, and Best Location Photo.

The Yarmouth Sand Sculpture Trail is free to the public and will be available for viewing throughout the summer and early fall, until Columbus Day.

To obtain a Sand Sculpture Trail map, visit the Yarmouth Chamber of Commerce Visitor Center, located at 424 Main St. Route 28 in West Yarmouth. To download a digital version of the map, or view photo contest rules and guidelines, visit www.yarmouthcapecod.com.

It’s time to put down your pail and shovel, and pick up a copy of the “2019 Yarmouth Sand Sculpture Trail” map. The whole family will enjoy this scavenger hunt style trail, as young and old will be amazed by the creativity, workmanship, and beauty of this unusual and fun form of art.

Tips for where to recycle or donate unused, unneeded items

By PAIGE IMPINK
News Correspondent
paige@yourtowncrier.com

As you move through the summer, perhaps you are inspired to address and clean out a few piles, drawers or closets that have eluded you. There are so many terrific ways to repurpose items that are no longer of use in your home, passing items on to those who could breathe new life into them and keep material out of our waste stream.

Linking residents with donation and recycling resources that help reduce the amount of trash being sent to landfills is an ongoing process. Every single piece of trash that is kept out of our municipal waste stream saves taxpayers. There are also misconceptions about what can and cannot be donated, so finding the “right” spot can sometimes be confusing.

However, with just a little research and patience, items can go on to another life and perhaps assist or benefit others in ways never anticipated. Here are some local options for donation, reuse and recycling.

Reduce clear plastic waste: Market Basket, Target, Hannaford and Kohl’s have recycling bins in the store for excess plastic bags. The bags go to Trex to be used in composite decking. But did you know that the bins also take dry cleaning bags, clear bread bags, ice bags, bubble wrap, pellet bags, and overwrap from cases of water, and the clear wrapping from your toilet paper and paper towel purchases?

Collect these clean, clear plastics and take to the store on your next trip and help reduce your own household trash.

Reduce household plastics: Think about using shampoo and conditioner bars instead of bottles. A new industry is springing up in the soap-making market with artisan crafted bar shampoos. Lush is a mall brand that may be familiar, but others are available online or at farmers markets. A terrific way to get rid of millions of shampoo bottles which are consumed each year.

Slow down laundry soap use: Did you know that your washer only needs two tablespoons of laundry soap to do its job? Imagine how much further you can stretch your detergent by cutting way back on the amount poured in. According to appliance repair professionals, too much detergent clogs up washers and piles up gunk in the machine. Reducing detergent is also better for our water downstream.

Pink bag program: Tewksbury’s free pink bags are where to donate soiled, ripped or stained items. Go through your sock drawer and fill up a bag with holey socks. As you clear out children’s drawers getting ready for back to school, any stained or worn out clothing can go in the bag. The textiles are recycled into industrial rags. The bags go out on your recycling day, placed next to your recycling toter. Another great way to reduce the tonnage going to landfills.

Goodwill Industries: There are several items that can be donated to Goodwill Industries that perhaps you didn’t know about. For example, if you have a single shoe that is good, Goodwill will take it and pair it with another lost cousin to create a new pair for someone in need. They also take old wires from VCRs or other electronics and strip out the copper. What a great solution! Goodwill takes old eyeglasses and gives them to those in need along with Halloween costumes and even old Christmas lights! The light cords are also stripped for copper as well.

However, with so many options to donate, there are still items that need to go in the trash. Our trash is turned into energy, so take heart in knowing that your items are not going to a landfill.

Items to Throw Away: Please throw expired food away — do not donate it to the food pantry. It creates a burden for the pantry volunteers to dispose of these items.

Please throw away old books. The library does not want books from your basement, training manuals from your old company, and books with cobwebs, yellowed pages or in crummy condition. It becomes a disposal burden. Just toss them.

Dirty, non-working small items. Throw them away. The old popcorn popper coated in butter is of no use to anyone. When donating, think if you’d use the item itself in that condition. Items can be used but should be usable and in respectable condition.

Get over the guilt that “someone” can use the item. They won’t. Ditch it.

5:49 p.m.: The Fire Department extinguished a patch of smoldering mulch on Main Street.

7:44 p.m.: Gwen Evans, 44, of 6 Loumac Road was arrested for disturbing the peace after a series of noise complaints which were not resolved after multiple police visits.

Woburn looking into developer's dump truck claim

Woburn 38's excavation contractor, Acton-based Onyx Construction, can manage outside sales logistics without having dump trucks backing up onto Main Street.

Though the ZBA just received the informational packet, which was requested by the city officials during a public meeting last month, Haverty confirmed Building Commissioner Thomas Quinn has been privy to some of the details. Quinn was asked by the ZBA last month to meet with Woburn 38 officials to discuss how the trucking logistics would function.

"One of the questions [the building commissioner] raised is whether vehicles would be queued on Main Street while waiting to be waived in. This schematic shows the ability to have 18 queuing trucks on the way in and two on the way out," the Chapter 40B law specialist explained.

Ultimately, the ZBA agreed to continue the matter until Sept. 18, when the local officials hope to review the scope of potential services contract with an outside traffic expert.

ZBA Chairman Margaret Pinkham last night advocated for hiring Vanasse Hangen Brustlin, Inc. (VHB), the same firm which advised the city in 2012, when Woburn 38 applied for a comprehensive permit to construct 168 apartments at the elevated site by the Wilmington line.

It's unknown whether VHB's staff is available for the follow-up study.

"The fact that [your engineer] was able to put little logos depicting tractor-trailers on this site [plan] doesn't necessarily reflect reality or prove it will work that way," said Pinkham of the Allen & Major schematics. "I'd feel a lot more comfortable if the board had the advice of a consultant who's experienced in these matters."

"VHB had advised the board on the issue of the trucking trips [when the Ledges at Woburn project was before us back in 2012]. I left a message with [VHB principal] Robert Nagi, but I have not yet heard back," she added.

Responding to Pinkham's ask, Haverty told the ZBA his client has no problem footing the bill for that review. However, the lawyer did stipulate that before putting up that funding, he would need to review the consultant's proposed scope-of-services.

For months now, the nine-acre site in North Woburn has been crawling with activity as contractors are in the midst of extensive earthworks operations in order to build the 168-unit apartment complex.

Maine Blasting and Drilling, which is supervising blasting on the site, is reportedly about half-way finished with its pre-construction work, which reportedly involves breaking up as much as 357,000 cubic yards of ledge.

Onyx Construction is using heavy machinery to process that ledge into crushed stone and other landscaping materials. The firm is also charged with overseeing the removal of that debris, which is expected to involve thousands of heavy trucking trips and take as long as two years.

The current petition before the ZBA is the result of a cease-and-desist order, issued by Quinn in May, which forbids Woburn 38 and its excavation contractor from selling the aggregate materials directly to third-party buyers. The building commissioner contends those arrangements violate multiple sections of Woburn's zoning code.

The first aspect of that appeal, brought before the ZBA during a meeting in June, is a direct challenge to Quinn's ruling. Specifically, Haverty is arguing a 2015 ruling by the Mass. Housing Appeals Committee (HAC), which the lawyer says grants his client the right to sell crushed stone, supersedes Woburn's authority to enforce its local zoning regulations.

Because the ZBA largely scoffed at that suggestion last month, Haverty agreed to temporarily shelve that direct appeal — though Woburn 38 has not yielded its rights to pursue the claims. Instead, the Concord attorney has asked the city officials to focus on a second part of the petition, which asks the ZBA to modify his client's comprehensive permit to sanction the proposed rock sales.

Under the request, Onyx Construction, after completing all sales transactions from its Acton offices, would be allowed to make arrangements for customers to pick-up the materials directly from the construction site.

The ZBA proceedings have attracted considerable public interest, especially from North Woburn residents who are already struggling with adverse impacts from the extensive blasting and trucking activity at 1042 Main St.

However, because zoning officials have not yet made a determination as to whether the permit modification constitutes a "substantial" change, citizens have been blocked from offering public comments.

Specifically, Woburn 38's request to amend its permits also requires the ZBA to make a determination as to whether the modification constitutes a material difference from the previously approved construction plans.

Last night, when a citizen tried to ask questions at the ZBA meeting, Pinkham advised the audience that the board will not be soliciting any new testimony in regards to the case. The ZBA chairman last month similarly stymied Haverty's attempts to let his client's excavation and traffic experts comment about operations at the site.

Should the ZBA rule the sale of rock will create a significant change in circumstances, Woburn 38 would be forced to hold a public hearing on the matter.

Former WHS Athlete underwent Brain Surgery

Family member to compete in Pan Mass Challenge on behalf of Peter Bamberg

By JAMIE POTE
Sports Editor

jamiepote@hotmail.com
Back on July 16th, Wilmington resident Peter Bamberg underwent brain surgery for a tumor at Brigham and Women's Hospital and will continue his treatment at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. In order to help with the costs and help with research, Bamberg's brother-in-law, Brian Irwin, will be competing in the annual Pan Mass Challenge Bike Ride next month.

"(Brian) has already surpassed his team's fundraising goal, but anything above and beyond will go directly to the neuro-oncology research team treating Pete and his specific type of tumor," said Peter's older brother Joe.

The Bamberg Family have been big fixtures in town for many years with all of the children excelling in athletics at one time or another. Peter was on the 1997 WHS Boys Soccer team which was recently inducted into the WHS Athletic Hall of Fame.

Peter's surgery was performed by Dr. David Reardon. He's the Center for Neuro-Oncology Clinical Director at Dana-Farber as well as a Prof. of Medicine at Harvard Medical School. On his website he outlined the goals of his research stating:

"The goals of my research are to: 1) identify exciting new treatments for brain cancer in the laboratory using animal models; 2) understand how these treatment approaches are working to fight cancer cells in order to optimize their effectiveness; and 3) move these promising approaches as quickly as possible to the clinic via clinical trials to help brain cancer patients. My laboratory focuses primarily on innovative and cutting-edge immunotherapies as single agents and in rationally designed, combination approaches that include a wide array of additional therapies. We utilize a variety of brain tumor models that are grown intracranially and treatments that are applied systemically and/or locally. We have access to state-of-the-art imaging systems including MRI, PET scans and bioluminescence to help us evaluate the "success" of our treatments in our animal models.

"We collaborate with sever-

al outstanding cancer immunology scientists who can help us comprehensively evaluate mechanisms of action of our therapies by applying advanced techniques to evaluate harvested intracranial tumors, draining lymph nodes, other lymphatic organs and peripheral blood. Results of our work continue to drive new clinical trials evaluating promising approaches for brain cancer patients.

"My research effort also extends into the clinic and specifically includes designing and implementing clinical trials to effectively evaluate promising new therapies as quickly as possible for our patients."

On Aug. 3 and 4, more than 6,700 riders, including Irwin and many others from Wilmington and Tewksbury will pedal up to 192 miles in the Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) with the goal of raising $60 million for cancer research and patient care at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Cyclists from 43 states and 12 countries will convene in Massachusetts to participate in the PMC, taking on one of 12 routes, which pass through 47 towns and range from 25 to 192 miles, designed to cater to all levels of cycling and fundraising ability.

Riders range in age from 13 to 88 and include everyone from seasoned triathletes to weekend warriors. Many ride to honor a family member or friend who has battled cancer, while more than 950 riders and volunteers are cancer survivors or current patients themselves-considered Living Proof® of the progress made in cancer research and treatment.

If you would like to donate on behalf of Peter Bamberg's treatment, you may go to Brian Irwin's PMC Page at: <https://profile.pmc.org/BI0010>; or you may also donate directly to Dr. Reardon's lab through the Jimmy Fund. There is a link to "Support My Research" on Dr. Reardon's Dana-Farber page at: <https://www.dana-farber.org/find-a-doctor/david-reardon/>

"If you are able to donate, any amount will be appreciated and go a long way in helping to continue the excellent level of care these hospitals provide, and advancements in treatments for brain cancer," said Joe Bamberg.

Tewksbury native enjoying incredible season

Adjustments have helped transform Oberg into one of MLB's top relievers

By JAMIE POTE
Sports Editor

jamiepote@hotmail.com
BRONX, NEW YORK -- Over his 13-year career, Mark Reynolds played for eight different teams and belted 298 career home runs. On Sunday morning, the Colorado Rockies cut the veteran, who probably will retire from Major League Baseball. He was able to become such a savvy and consistent player for a decade-plus because he constantly made adjustments, whether it was with his swing or in the field, originally being drafted as a shortstop before moving to third base and then first over the latter part of his career.

Tewksbury's Scott Oberg has been a teammate of Reynolds on two different occasions, first when the two helped the Rockies into the playoffs back in 2017 and over the course of this season. When Reynolds found out that he was being cut, he said it was "a blow to his stomach", which was along the same line of the feelings that Oberg had when the Rockies sent him to the minor leagues back in May of 2018. Oberg was told at the time of the demotion that he needed to make adjustments to become a better and more consistent relief pitcher.

He has certainly done that! Since getting called up to the Big Club a month later, Oberg has not only dramatically turned his career around, but has been the Rockies' best pitcher -- starter or reliever -- for the past calendar year and one of the best relievers/set-up pitchers in not just the National League, but all of MLB.

"The tempo and his delivery were huge (adjustments)," said Rockies' pitching coach Steve Foster from the visiting dugout before Sunday's game at Yankee Stadium. "He was 1. (to) 1.6 (seconds) to (home) plate with a big leg lift and now he's 1.25 consistently and it's a quicker leg kick. Now he's doing that with every pitch. It wasn't every third pitch, it's with every pitch the same timing and that's helped too. It's also a lot of work."

"If you are a guy with a big leg kick that's a very tough thing to change. It was about him using (more of his) arm than his legs, so now the timing is right on most of those pitches. The less time you have with your delivery, the less you have for margin of error. The longer the delivery, the longer the levers and the more time you have for margin of error. When your strike foot hits, it's go-go and that's what he is doing now, all of the time, consistently."

Before the 2017 season, Oberg had four pitches his arsenal and had ERAs of 5.09, 5.19 and 4.94 through his first three seasons. The Rockies then named Bud Black the team's manager and he along with Foster urged Oberg to eliminate his curveball and change-up, use a four-seam fastball instead of a two-seamer, all the while change his delivery and speed up his tempo. The results? Oberg's first half ERA this season was the lowest in franchise history and his current ERA of 1.35 is second in the National League.

"(Making those adjustments) was our message and he came back and did exactly what we told him to do," said Foster. "That's a great message for all players because going down is a shock to the pride and a shock to the ego to go back to the minor leagues. When you are asked to do something that we know will help you and you go back there and do it, and come back and it works for you, it's just a great message for all players."

Petti signs back with Thunder of the ECHL

By JAMIE POTE
Sports Editor

jamiepote@hotmail.com

On Tuesday afternoon, the Adirondack Thunder, the ECHL affiliate of the New Jersey Devils, announced that they have signed forward Derek Petti for the 2019-20 season.

Petti, 24, of Tewksbury, made his professional debut last season with the Thunder, playing four games in March after completing his college career at Merrimack College. Petti notched 49 points in 127 games while in school (20 goals, 29 assists) and recorded seven goals and 11 assists in 28 games in his senior campaign.

"We are excited to see what Derek can do now that he has some pro experience under his belt from last season," Thunder Head Coach Alex Loh said. "Going through the motions of training camp will lead to more confidence and we're looking forward to watching him reach his potential."

Petti was asked about his decision to go back to the Thunder.

"It was a no-brainer when finding out that they would have me back in Adirondack," he said. "It's a great place for development as a player and as a person with opportunities on and off the ice. It's a great organization to be a part of with great coaches, trainers and teammates."

Petti didn't register any goals or assists in those four games and finished with a -1 plus-minus ratio, as well as six minutes in penalties. He is hoping to see more action when this season gets underway.

"After seeing some time with them last year, I'm excited to go back and show what I can do and see how my game forms at the professional level," he said. "It's always been a dream to play at the highest level, so I look forward to seeing my potential in a very competitive league. I definitely want to keep improving every year to see what my career can uphold."

Before playing at Merrimack, Petti played USHS-Prep for the Middlesex Black Bears and was named captain for the 2014-15 season. The 6'2 forward finished with 186 points, including 97 goals, 89 assists in 90 games played. Before the Black Bears, Petti played four years at TMHS, helped lead the team to a state title, while, he was a Lowell Sun Player of the Year and also the Town Crier's Male Athlete of the Year.

To purchase tickets for a Thunder game for this season, you may call 518-480-3355 or visit ECHLThunder.com/-tickets.

Over his last nine games, he has given up just one run. Since the Town Crier last chatted with Oberg when he pitched at Fenway in May, he has given up just three earned runs, while striking out 37 batters in 27.2 innings. He currently ranks fifth in the NL with a .168 batting average against. On top of that, Oberg has a 1.69 ERA at hitter friendly Coors Field compared to 5.08 ERA at the same park just two years ago.

"Overall I feel good and I'm happy where I'm at mentally and physically. I'm excited to take the ball whenever I'm given the opportunity and go from there," said Oberg from the team's clubhouse that same morning. "Things are going well for the most part. I'm keeping the walks down and that's what hurt me (last Tuesday against the Giants). The last couple of times I have given up runs, it's been a reoccurring theme where I have walked a batter and the runner comes around to score. It's funny how that stuff works out."

"The confidence is definitely there, it's just a matter of going out there and executing the pitches and doing everything I can to help the team on that day."

LET'S SLIDE TO THE RIGHT

Back when Oberg was a star pitcher at TMHS, his bread and butter was his electric fastball and his dominating curveball. From there, he went to UConn where he was converted to a relief pitcher and had tremendous success as an individual, while being on a team with a handful of other now current MLB players.

Oberg was then drafted by the Rockies and he quickly moved up the minor league ladder making his debut against the Giants in April of 2015.

Becoming the first kid from town to appear in a MLB game certainly was not easy. If you ask Oberg, he said a big reason he made it to the 'Show' was his two-seam fastball which was clocked in the mid to high 90s, but today that pitch is off the table.

"Some guys have a good feel for (the two-seamer) and some guys don't," said Oberg. "It was a pitch for me that got me up to this level and then when you get here, you have to make adjustments. It's stuff that I have worked on and I'm comfortable with where I'm at. I feel as if I can put the ball on both sides of the plate and I'm in a good place with my four-seam fastball."

Today that four-seam fastball registers at an average of 94.3 miles per hour (although he frequently gets it up to the 96-to-97 mile per hour range) - the average across the league is 88.9. Add that to an absolutely devastating slider, which Oberg has vastly improved since coming back from his minor league trip, and the results and numbers speak for themselves.

"Once we put all of the focus on the slider, it became more of a consistent pitch - between the release, the way the ball comes out of my hand, the break and everything like that, and I'm able to control it a little bit better," said Oberg. "Then I was able to put the two-seamer off to the side a little bit and (also) focus on the four-seamer and being able to drive the ball through my target. That's giving me a better chance of having the ball go where I want it to go as it's supposed to be on a straight path. I don't have to worry as much about controlling movement so much but control the pitch.

"I was almost doing myself an injustice to myself and it took me a little bit to realize that (the two-seam fastball) doesn't work or this is not working right now, so let's try something different."

That's exactly what the entire Rockies organization wanted from Oberg when he was sent down - try to do some things differently. With the help of the Triple-A Manager Glenallen Hill, Oberg was able to work on his slider, while making the other adjustments.

"The curveball and change-up have been complimentary pitches for him," said Foster. "We felt like in the one or two innings (he would pitch out of the bullpen) that if he stuck with his two primary pitches and got those in and out of the zone like we wanted, it would be better than having one really good pitch and three average pitches. Now he has two really plus pitches."

"His slider is a wipe-out pitch. I think (the improvement of that pitch is a) combination of the grip, the lateness of the break, lengthening it, getting it further down the slope and closer to the hitter where the break starts exactly. It's hard to pitch identification for the hitter and I think that has really improved with him. I think it's just a matter of there's no one more disciplined than that's more, not stuck in his ways as far as being stubborn, but a strong believability because he puts in the time and the work. He does dry work everyday and he does it by himself. That discipline is part of who he is and it has gotten to become who he is."

It's clearly evident this year that Oberg is much more comfortable on the mound, with his arsenal of pitches and being able to execute them all at any given time. If that wasn't the case, he wouldn't be such a popular player with the Rockies Fan Base.

"I don't know about any of that," he said with a smile. "Everything for me stays the same. Maybe it's that way on the internet, but I don't pay attention to that stuff."

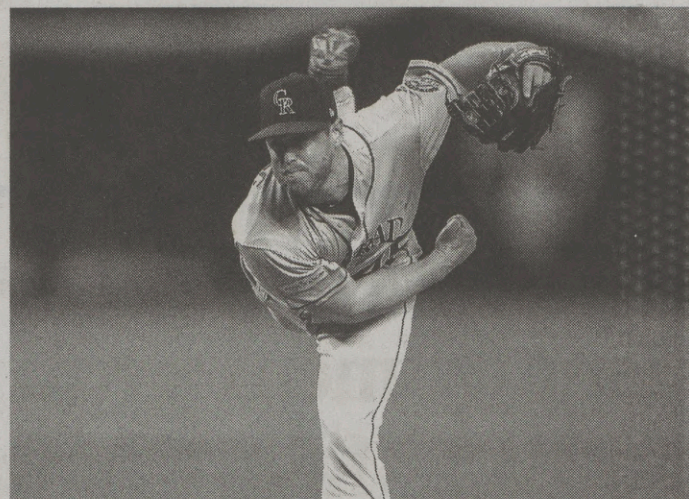

Certainly the rest of MLB has paid attention to this flamethrowing right-hander, who continues to get better and better.

"The more than you get out there and the more that you perform what you practice doing and he does it in his mind over and over," said Foster. "The elite athletes for me, the great ones, they perform what they are going to do before they get there and again that goes back to his discipline and his training."

"(Oberg's) numbers have changed because of the pitch execution and the pitch selection is a product of the work that he puts in. You put those two things together (along with) you are talking one tremendous human being with incredible, positive everyday consistency. When you have that combination with the talent - it's character plus talent and it's discipline plus talent, so it's not just talent - and he has put in the time and effort to become who he is and now he believes."

Getting a later break with his slider and being able to execute it on both sides of the plate to both lefties and righties has changed Oberg from a sixth inning guy to an elite eighth inning pitcher, setting up for veteran Wade Davis. Two years ago, Oberg had a 4.50 ERA against left-handed pitchers and today it's 0.93.

"I've had success against lefties because I'm able to throw the slider back door, I can throw the fastball on both sides of the plate, either down and away or I can go up (and all of that) just opens up more possibilities," he said. "If I have a decent enough feel for the change-up I'll throw it for a strike. It doesn't have to be that great of a pitch, it just has to be in the strike zone and something different. It's not a fastball and it's not a slider, so that's definitely one of those pitches that just resets some things a little bit. Once guys think that they are sitting on a specific pitch and then I throw that one then they are thinking that 'he threw me something I wasn't looking for'."

Before Sunday's game, the Rockies were in the middle of a tough six-game losing streak and were 2-12 in the month of July. The team took some hits in the standings and will need to regroup and get on a hot streak in the next few weeks if the team wants to make a third straight trip to the post-season. Oberg has helped the Rockies make two straight playoff appearances, including being the winning pitcher in last year's epic extra inning wild card game against the Cubs.

"If we continue to stay positive and with the type of talent that we have on this team, I think we can definitely make a run, put some pressure on some other teams and get a little closer down the stretch," said Oberg. "There's still a lot of games left (on the schedule). We know how good we are, so at the end of the day it's a frustrating of where we are (in the standings) because it seems like everything (wrong) is happening at the same time and it makes for a tricky situation."

"As long as we keep our composure, and move forward, I think we will have a shot for one of those wild-card spots."

BRONX, NEW YORK - After going 12 straight appearances without giving up a run, Tewksbury's Scott Oberg has given up three runs over his last two appearances, including two in Sunday's 8-4 win over the New York Yankees. And in both games, he walked the lead-off hitter.

"I can't give up lead-off walks. That hurt me again. I

Under 12 Softball team takes home some trophies

By JOSH CAREDEO
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
TEWKSBURY -- The Tewksbury Redmen 12U District All-Star Softball team has had quite the run over the last couple months. After winning their first tournament in April in Nashua, NH, the Redmen have been dominate in the tournaments that have followed.

First place finishes at the Seacoast Showdown in Epping, NH and the Summer Splash Tournament in Westford have added to the stellar resume.

The Redmen have also taken second place at the Think Pink and Alzheimer's Classic tournaments, good for an overall record of 33-10.

The team is comprised of almost all 11-year-old girls from Tewksbury, Bedford and Woburn.

"They have been together exclusively for the past two years practicing, training and playing year-round," said head coach Rich Iandoli.

Every player on the team has made a major contribution this summer. The pitching stars have been Alyx Rossi, who has thrown three no hitters while averaging more than 15 strikeouts in her appearances, and Vanessa Iandoli, who has also thrown two no hitters and been a solid "number two" starter, winning a dozen games for the Redmen.

Hannah Niemszyk has been a solid third pitcher in the rotation. She won all four of her games pitched and has been one of the most consistent hitters in the lineup, batting second most of the season.

Brooke Khourie has anchored behind the plate and caught almost every inning of every game for the Redmen. "[On top of that] her bat has contributed many key hits," said Iandoli.

The other offensive stars have been Laney Mead, who leads the teams with five homeruns, and Grace Forsythe and Abby Tower, who have anchored down the middle of the lineup and are among the team's leaders in runs batted in.

Avery Simpson has been a great addition to the team this year. "She has contributed some very timely hits, great speed and tremendous outfield defense," said Iandoli.

In Westford, Simpson's full out diving catch late in the game helped Tewksbury win the championship.

Riley Trask and Jayme Martin have contributed amazing speed and base running skills while, playing key positions on defense and doing everything asked of them to benefit the team. Madison Paulding has been a leader at the plate with many key hits and runs-batted-in, which has helped with the Redmen's success.

In addition to a strong summer run, the Redmen have used these tournaments for a good cause. The Think Pink Tournament has raised over $10,000 for Breast Cancer research. The Alzheimer's Classic has raised over $2,000 for awareness of this disease.

The Redmen host six-week-end tournaments from April through September and over 225 teams from all over the Northeast attend. In early August, Tewksbury will host the 30th Annual End of Your Tournament and for the first time, the tournament will benefit ALS research.

In September, the Redmen will play host to the Second Annual Lymphoma Invitational, which will include a college showcase component for 16U and 18U teams from all over New England.

The Tewksbury Redmen 12U District All Star team includes Grace Forsythe, Vanessa Iandoli, Brooke Khourie, Jayme Martin, Hannah Niemszyk, Madison Paulding, Alyx Rossi, Avery Simpson, Abby Tower, and Riley Trask.

Rich Iandoli, John Niemszyk, Kristen Rossi, Ted Tower, and Brian Trask coach the team.

Try outs for the 2020 Redmen Travel teams are posted online at tewksbury-girlssoftball.com. Iandoli says the plan is to field multiple teams at all age levels, including 10U, 12U, 14U, 16U, and 18U. An interested player's age division will be determined on upon January 1, 2020.

State Champion Girls Hockey Team honored at Fenway Park

BOSTON -- Back on Monday, July 15th, the state champion Tewksbury/Methuen Co-Op Girls Hockey team was honored with two other local high school winter state championship teams, at Fenway Park before the Boston Red Sox took on the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Division 1 State Champion Red Rangers, who recently were given their state championship rings, walked from the warning track and down to the field, while being introduced to the sold out crowd.

"We had a lot of fun. It was nice to end our Red Ranger victory tour in Boston just down the street from where it all started," said Tory Sweeney, a member of the team, while noting that 'the victory tour' comment is a fun inside joke with the team. "We all got to spend more time with each other at the game and have fun cheering on the Red Sox. Going on the field at the game and getting recognized for our accomplishments was a great feeling."

The Red Rangers finished this past season with an overall record of 22-1-1, which included the epic 2-1 double-overtime win over No. 1 seed Austin Prep to capture the program's first ever state championship title.
